VARIETY OF LITIGATION

Many Questions of Law Touched On-No Cases From Local Courts.

The Suprems Court of Appeals handed down nineteen opinions yesterday, all of considerable interest, but none from Richmond or Henrico courts.

Digests of a number of the learned discussion of the cases by the Supreme Court judges are appended: Wolverton vs. Hollman, From Circuit

Court of Shenandoah county. Opinion by Judge Keith, president.

The case arises from a contention regarding the right of Leannah Wolverton Metropolitan Life Insurance Company vs. Hale. Circuit Court of Alleginary count. Opinion by Judge Buchanan, This was upon an action against a vount. Opinion by Judge Buchanan.

This was upon an action against a life insurance company to compel it to pay a policy, where the policy hall lapsed before the death of the insured.

Miss Hale, of Covington, Va., was insured in Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, of which one Gilmore was agent. The quarterly premiums were due on the 16th of April, July, October and January of each year. Gilmore had been in the habit of collecting the premiums on the 20th, giving a recelpt signed by one of the officers of the company. On July 21st Gilmore went to the Hale house to collect the premium, but Mrs. Hale, mother of the insured, requested that he come the next day, July 22d. Gilmore agreed to accept the payment on the next day, but said he would be out of town, and that Mr. Hill, assistant suprintendent, would call for the money. Mr. Hill d'a not call. On the 3d of August Mrs. Hale sent the amount of the premium to Gilmore, who had returned, and who rece'pted to her for it. When, the next morning, he offered the money to officials at the local office, they refused to receive it, saying that the policy had been cancelled, and that Miss Hale was sick with typhoid fever.

She died two days later, and the insurance company refused to pay the point on the grounds that the insured had forfoited her rights by failing to pay the premium, as provided by the policy. The court held that the agent had no power to blind the company in extending the time for the payment of a premium, as provided by the policy. The court held that the agent had no power to blind the company in extending the time for the payment of a premium, as provided by the policy. Judgment reversed, and case remanded for a new trial to Circuit Court of Alleghany county.

Harrisburg Case.

Henry L. Ranklin vs. The Town of Harrisonburg; from Circuit Court of Rockingham county. Opinion by Judge Keith, president.

The town of Harrisonburg gave notice to Runklin and others that it would raise a dam across the Shenandoah River from five to fitteen feet. The parties to whom notice was given objected to the dam boing raised, on the grounds that their farms would be injured. A commission was appointed and damages were allowed the land-owners, but the Circuit Court of Rockingham quashed that portion of the report of the commissioners that set out the amount of damage.

Appeal was taken, and the Court of Appeals entered an order reversing and annulling the judgment of the Circuit Court in striking out the clause allowing the damages reported by the commissioners.

The court said: "And this court, pro-phrase of which only he is master.. This was not, he said, his first appearance in Richmond; that here had centered for many years of early life his thoughts; that here he had returned home from college. If, as has been said, a poet dies in every young man, that here he is buried and Richmond is hallowed ground. He had never spoken in Richmond before, though he had been before invited. In 1857 he was asked by the Richmond Lyceum to speak and had felt that the young prophet was to be not without honor in his own country; but the Lyceum falled, and the address then prepared only appeared in the "Essays and Studies." Children of a Classic Past.

His first talk he called a peep through a grammarian's spectacles. He declared that we all are children of the classic past, all live the life of the classic. His subject he divided into Language and Literature. He meant language not in philoiogical sense, but in the artistic sense; nothing is more intimate than one's language. It is safer to criticise one's
